
1966. It was hosted by singer Johnny Young. Each episode revolved around Young meeting different music teachers for what he called "music lessons". Production The Music Lesson was produced and directed by Rod Long, and overseen by Peter Black. As described by The Canberra Times, "a number of talented young talent of the musical scene, including the bass guitarist from the Tempo Blue Trio, were also on hand to give the 15 episodes a much needed boost." Episodes were broadcast on Sunday afternoons, and were also rebroadcast on HSV-7 during the early months of 1967. Each episode followed a similar structure, with Young meeting his subjects in a classroom, and proceeding to have a jam session with them, where the main topics for the session were decided between the host and subjects. At times, the programme also deviated from this structure. Cast Johnny Young as himself Episode status The entire series is missing from the archives.
