It was released in August 1964 as the second single from the album George Jones Swings, George Jones Sings. The song reached number 10 on the Billboard Hot Country Singles chart and number 7 on the RPM Country Tracks chart in Canada. Background and writing "Mighty Mouse" was originally written by songwriters Hal Bynum and Clarence Carter as "Lonely Fugitive." The song's first recording was made in November 1963 by Deana Martin and was released on Atlantic Records as a single in April 1964. This version of "Lonely Fugitive" did not chart. "Mighty Mouse" was written in 1963. Jones first recorded it as a demo with Richard Davis in 1963 for Sun Records. In 1963, in Nashville, Jones sang a portion of the song at a party, and as he sang the line "Up in the morning and don't know where I'm going to" he "must have had a good hit on his head because he went into such a state that he never lost that flat, totally flat, tone." Reception Music critic Robert Palmer described "Mighty Mouse" as a "mock-heroic," and AllMusic critic Stephen Thomas Erlewine called it a "simple, straight-ahead country pop song with killer lyrics." In this context, apperception has a particular sense: a unified subject who can think about how her mind behaves. Thus, in regards of perceiving one's own mental processes, we may make the distinction between: the unity of apperception, and the unity of experience, which is the unity of the inner and outer senses. In this paper I will discuss the possibility of experiencing one's mental processes using consciousness of a general and transcendental nature, and I will attempt to clarify what it means to think about our own mental processes. 6d1f23a050
