This was my second attempt at dealing with

WOW, and my second time calling tech support. My first was catastrophic. I called WOW yesterday morning, after reading the extremely negative reviews for this company. I got the most pleasant man on the phone, who said he would be happy to help. He said they had my area code as one of their local numbers. So I was right that they do have phone service. However, they did not recognize me as a WOW customer, which they should have, especially since I was trying to order the power outlet from them for my new board. He finally transferred me to his supervisor, who didn't know anything about me or the power outlet to which I wanted to order. There was no way to leave a message for the supervisor, and I still had not actually ordered the power outlet. It was about 2:30 in the afternoon, and the supervisor also did not know how to get in touch with the customer service department. Finally, I sent an e-mail to customer service, which they were able to access about an hour later. I still had not got through to a person about the power outlet. So I did not order it. I then asked for the original e-mail that had said the representative would call me back in the morning. It was sent in an e-mail, which I got. The customer service representative never called back. As you can see, this company is a complete disaster. 6d1f23a050
