I'm a happy customer of the Photoshop app. My recent experience has simply been a great one, and I'm not just saying that because of the happy review I just wrote. I tested the same thing today with some photos that I edited just a short while ago with PS CC. Performance and quality is impeccable. I was annoyed, as a customer, to hear about the delays in 5.2, but that neither impacts my rating, nor stops me from updating. Reply by Adobe SupportEverest: "Your comments regarding Elements 8 was the first time I've heard something like that. Having been an avid user of PS Elements since the very beginning, I'm sorry you didn't find it intuitive enough. Moving forward, we're working on even more intuitive ways of using the new organization." I am pleased with the performance of the new Photoshop. I have not found it to be bloated or slow in day to day use, but I am continuing to use the Adobe XD application which seems to be a clone of Adobe Illustrator. When I was a student, Adobe Design Suite would often be just as slow as Photoshop. I am happy to have Photoshop on my iPad. I think that it is a great app because I can use it when I am on the train, and at home or when I am traveling. A serious video editor like Adobe Premiere Pro, while addressing the pros and cons of Premiere Pro and After Effects, is the clear choice for video editing professionals.

From their their forum : "it's built for those who are serious about video editing.

"While Apple does offer its assumptions that Apple users are more interested in photo editing, Adobe's messaging about its applications is broader. While those interested in video editing might not necessarily think of photo editing first, Adobe's line of creativity tools is a solid one to consider.

What could be better than editing on a mobile device ? It's faster, more direct, and convenient.

Apple users should note that switching among editing tools feels simplistic. There's no need for a top bar, and applying multiple changes feels like they apply to everything.

The good news is that the latest version of Photoshop is free.
